

For Immediate Release

Contact: David Green, 615-517-5653, dgreen@fdrsafety.com

Former global safety director for GM joins FDRsafety as senior advisor

BRENTWOOD, TN, Feb. 4, 2010 -- Mike Taubitz, former global safety director for General Motors, has joined FDRsafety, a national safety consulting firm based Brentwood, TN.

Taubitz, who is an expert in integrating safety with highly efficient manufacturing and business processes, will be serving FDRsafety as a senior advisor. Besides his stint as global safety director, Taubitz served in a number of senior roles at GM, including Global Regulatory Liaison.

“We are delighted to have Mike on board,” said Fred D. Rine, chief executive officer of FDRsafety. “The deep safety expertise Mike developed at GM fits right in with our emphasis on expertise and experience.”

Rine and the other principal at FDRsafety, company President Jim Stanley, both have extensive backgrounds in safety. Rine created one of the most well-regarded safety programs in the country during his career at FedEx. Stanley is a former No. 2 official for the U.S. Occupational Safety and Health Administration.

For more information about Taubitz and FDRsafety, please visit www.fdrsafety.com.

About FDRsafety

FDRsafety is one of the nation’s leading consulting firms in occupational safety and health. FDRsafety serves a range of clients, from some of the largest companies in manufacturing, construction, steel, chemicals and oil and gas to small and mid-sized companies. Services include safety staffing, OSHA compliance, safety training, expert witnesses and industrial hygiene.